PADRE SERRA SAYS:

“Community” describes the life religious brothers and sisters choose. Community enables the individual to reach out to others with the strength and courage that comes from knowing, “I don’t have to do it alone. Others stand with me in this My abilities are complemented by their gifts, confidence, wisdom and visions.” In community, sisters and brothers live out their vowed commitments, knowing that, though each member is unique, the binding force in life is each one’s personal and communal relationship with Jesus. Today, the three vows (celibacy, poverty and obedience) which most religious make in a public way, may seem to be out of step with an age of sexual revolution. They are considered inconsistent with the popular demand for more and better “things,” and with the ultimatums for the individual’s “personal rights.” Celibacy is a gift and a promise to love very deeply and to express that love for others without using those physical expressions proper to marriage. The lives of many men and women religious are rich and loving within the context of celibate love as are the lives of happily married couples. In a world waging war on poverty, men and women religious choose to live as Jesus did — simply. Because they share expenses and try to keep their personal and communal needs simple, they can get along very well on very little. Then, there’s obedience. The obedience of sisters and brothers is to the God they love, and the ways to this love are not obscure. God’s voice is heard in the many voices of community. Everyone has a vocation; pray for your. Serra for priestly and religious vocations
